

Harbour-Urban Beaches Interaction: Case of San Anders Beach

José M. Medina-Villaverde⁽¹⁾ and José S. López-Gutiérrez⁽²⁾

⁽¹⁾ CEDEX - Ministry for Public Works, Antonio López, 81, 28026 Madrid Spain

Tel +34-91-3357657 Fax +34-91-3357622

e-mail: Jose.M.Medina@cedex.es

⁽²⁾ Agustin de Betancourt Foundation, Madrid University of Technology, School of Civil Engineering, Ciudad Universitaria s/n, Madrid

Tel +34-91-3357663 Fax +34-91-3357622 e-mail: Santos.Lopez@cedex.es

Abstract

San Andres beach is located in the province of Malaga, southern Spain. Recently, two different studies have been there undertaken: on one hand, the Port of Malaga has enlarged its main breakwater, and this event induced movements in the beach. On the other hand, demolition of the near quarter to the beach gave the chance to redefine the public domain in order to get a "complete" beach with no interactions with buildings. This paper refers to the first question.